Yvonne Riaño is an Associate Professor at the Institute of Geography (IGG) of the University of Neuchâtel (Switzerland). She is also Vice-President of the Swiss Federal Commission on Migration (EKM), President of the Swiss Association of Geographers (ASG) and Chairperson of the Swiss Committee of the International Geographical Union (IGU). She obtained her PhD in Geography from the University of Ottawa (Canada) in 1996. Since then she has regularly taught at Austrian, Swiss, Spanish and Canadian universities. She actively combines academic research with socially engaged filmmaking practices. Her documentary "Weaving Threads Across Borders" (2022) gives voice to migrant women in the Colombia-Venezuela border zone and seeks a research practice based on reciprocity. Using a feminist perspective and participatory methodologies, her research contributes to the field of Geographies of Inequality in both European and South American cities. Her research covers (a) the inclusion and exclusion of highly skilled migrant and non-migrant professionals in the Swiss labour market; (b) the critical spaces and moments that shape ethnic and gender inequalities in the labour market; (c) the transnational strategies of migrant entrepreneurs; (d) the re-integration strategies of returning migrants; (e) the self-management of urban resources by low-income communities in Latin American barrios. She has published 65 articles in internationally peer-reviewed books and journals such as "Environment and Planning A"; "Equality, Diversity & Inclusion"; "Diversities", "Géo-Regards", "Geografiska Annaler: Series B, Human Geography"; "Globalizations"; "ZFW Advances in Economic Geography"; "Globalizations, Societies and Education" (GSE); "Journal of International Migration & Integration" (JIMI); "Migraciones Internacionales", "Population, Space & Place" (PSP), "Oxford Bibliographies", "Qualitative Research" (QR).
